Cultural Infusion 60 Second

Dana Arviso: Public Broadcasting offers viewers a unique opportunity to see inside our lives— young urban natives—and to see the complexities of our realities.

Jessica Torres: I grew up watching American Family and that gave me a lot of perspective because I had never seen a family—a Chicano family—that looked like mine on TV.

Sue Chew: Being a Chinese American, public TV actually offers me an outlet and a way of relating to the world that is so important to me.

Esther Wu: I think that learning more about our diverse backgrounds our diverse cultures will lead to better understand and tolerance of one another

Robert Iopa: The more we understand other cultures the more we can practice tolerance toward other cultures, the better off we'll be as a people.

Gloria Bond Clunie: Public Television is my source

Jessica Torres: PBS is my source

Mahealani Suapaia: PBS is my source

Matt Gong: PBS is my source

Mi-Ai Parrish: PBS is my source

Robert Iopa: PBS is my source for cultural infusion.
