I think PBS is extremely valuable to all people because it has a great variety of programming and its accessible to all types of people.

Men of Hula was extremely captivating in the sense that I could strongly identify with the art because I am a hula dancer, It was about this unique group of men who dance for Robert Cazimero. And it was about their journey to mastering a dance for competition, which was the Merrie Monarch competition. It really captures the essence of what hula is.

Someone who is unfamiliar might just think its just a beautiful dance but really its all about a lifestyle a set of cultural practices and beliefs that are very important to people who are apart of the Hawaiian culture.

My name is Lauli'a Ah Wong. PBS is my source for cultural identity.
