Public Education 60 Second

Jessica Torres: I grew up watching shows like Barney, Reading Rainbow and Arthur—the really educational shows.

Rosa Pache: PBS was my first experience with English—the positive experience, at least. And I could only attribute that to Sesame Street on the television.

Jacqueline Gartell: Our students come to school already prepared after having been immersed in the preschool or early childhood programming that PBS offers. Parents enjoy PBS programming and often that's the only TV that they'll allow their children to watch.

Dr. Louis Sullivan: Public television, I believe, helped open up the world to young people in a way that other forms of broadcast do not.

Ruben Martinez: I believe that public television is the largest library in the world.

Jacqueline Gartell: We are John Eaton Elementary school and PBS Kids is our source for...

Children: Fun and education!
