Public News 60 Second

Dr. Louis Sullivan: I'm Dr. Louis Sullivan, President Emeritus of Morehouse School of Medicine and former US Secretary of Health and Human Services. The broad array of programs, I think, are interesting and really inform the public.

Mi-Ai Parrish: I'm Mi-Ai Parrish and I'm the publisher of the Idaho Statesman. A more informed populous is a positive thing. And when you have people seeing different points of view, different perspectives, different opinions, and being open to that then that makes us better.

Sue Chew: My name is Sue Chew and I'm a state representative in Idaho. Public TV is where I can pretty much rest assured what I'm seeing is anchored in something is pretty objective.
Esther Wu: I think that it has done a wonderful job to serve the community and for me that's the highest compliment that I can give a television station.

Mi-Ai Parrish: PBS is my source for in depth complicated nuanced news reporting.

Sue Chew: PBS is my source for understanding the world beyond my own day to day existence. It's vital.
